BILLERICA - While discussing the devastating effects of Hurricane Katrina last year, a group of Shawsheen Valley Technical High School freshman Diesel Mechanic students started talking about the topic of soaring energy costs and possible alternatives. From that initial discussion, a powerful learning experience was born.

Now, as tenth graders, the students have spent the year working on a unique project - turning a 1983 diesel-powered Mercedes Benz into a dual-fuel system that utilizes both diesel fuel and waste vegetable oil (WVO). Instead of relying on expensive and environmentally harmful petroleum-based fuel, WVO produces no significant hazardous emissions, can be any type of naturally grown oil including peanut and corn and, in some cases, costs nothing to obtain.

"We will eventually run out of fossil fuels, but WVO is a renewable source," said Wilmington's Eric Haley. "I think that diesel mechanics will encounter more and more of these types of dual-fuel system vehicles in the future."

"This project was student initiated and turned into a learning experience for all those involved including the instructors," said Shawsheen Tech Diesel Lead Teacher John Havens. "It involves the development/use of critical thinking, engineering, design, fabrication, mechanical, safety and trouble shooting skills. It is truly a college-level project done by Shawsheen Tech tenth grade stu-

Governor's veto affects Butters Farm

Wilmington legislators prepare to override

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - A lot can happen in the span of a week. Though the legislature's Budget Conference Committee Report OK'd $450,000 for the purchase and preservation of the historic Butters Farm, as reported in the Town Crier last week, those funds were a casualty of Governor Mitt Romney's weekend veto of $573 million.

Butters Farm will not be facing the business end of a bulldozer, however, thanks to a nearly unanimous vote at the 2006 Annual Town Meeting, which authorized the Town to appropriate the $450,000 to save the 300+-year-old farmhouse. Despite the vote, Wilmington lawmakers, Rep. James Miceli, Rep. Charles Murphy, and Senator Bruce Tarr have been looking to relieve Wilmington taxpayers of the full financial burden through state reimbursement.

Miceli had inserted an amendment for the $450,000, which made through the House Budget. Tarr had made three similar amendments in the Senate, but the final Senate budget allowed for only $225,000. Both budgets were taken up by the Conference Committee, resulting in the 2007 Budget Conference Committee Report, which included the full $450,000.

The Governor's vetoes included $112 million worth of, what Romney categorized as, "election year giveaways" related to local projects.

Where will you be in an emergency? Be at the Middle School July 26th

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - The Board of Health is preparing to update its Emergency Procedure Plan and, no matter what your background, you are invited to help.

With a regional grant from the Department of Public Health, a letter is being mailed out within the next few days to every household in Wilmington. The letter advises residents of the formation of a Medical Reserve Corps (MRC) made up of citizen volunteers whose members would stand ready to assist the community in the event of an emergency.

"Many communities have begun updating their Emergency Procedure Plans in the light of recent disasters, such as September 11th, Hurricane Katrina, Tsunamis, a possible Flu Pandemic and other incidents that could initiate a response from the government and citizens," Director of Health, Gregory Erickson states in the letter.

Wilmington's MRC is being formed locally in cooperation with the 34 communities that make up Massachusetts Public Health Region 4a. Wilmington volunteers are given the choice of restricting their MRC participation to Wilmington, or may choose to assist in other Region 4a communities as well.

"This is not just for medical professionals," Erickson stresses. "There are large numbers of crucial positions within the MRC that anyone can do."

In an emergency situation involving a mass immunization, for instance, MRC volunteers would organize parking, would act as 'greeters' to disseminate information, and would handle every other role imaginable.

"The MRC would even provide childcare services during an emergency," Erickson said. "We are looking for volunteers from all walks of life."

The Upper Merrimack Valley MRC was recently called into action to deal with the catastrophic floods that hit Lowell and surrounding communities this past May. MRC members manned emergency centers as hundreds of residents were evacuated from their homes.

Local man victim of stabbing

Condition improved, suspect arraigned

By STEVE DeMARCO

BURLINGTON - The condition of a Wilmington man, the victim of what police called a "serious and vicious stabbing" in Burlington this past weekend, has improved, according to a Lahey Clinic spokeswoman.

The woman said in a telephone interview this morning that Kyle Hendricks, 23, of Lawrence Street, is listed in good condition at the hospital. This is an upgrade from his previous condition of critical but stable.

According to police, Hendricks received five stab wounds - three to the chest, and two to the arms - in an apparent fight between two groups at the Staybridge Suites hotel in Burlington early Sunday.

Facing charges in the stabbing, according to police, is William Najjar, 18, of Bernard Street in Woburn.

Najjar, police said, is

Wilmington's K-9 unit

Palmer and Kimo continue to hit the mark

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - Meet Officer Eric Palmer, a six year veteran of the force, and his 3-year old partner, Kimo; Wilmington's first police K-9 unit since the mid-eighties. Over the last two years this human-canine team has recovered missing children, suspects and evidence in crimes, sniffed out drugs, and impressed law enforcement personnel all over the region. Recently the team participated in two 'certification and competition' events impressing judges and other K9 teams all around.

It's Your Money

by Joyce Brisbois

WHEN YOU INHERIT SECURITIES

When you inherit securities—just like any other assets—your basis in the property is its value at the death of the bequestor (or, in certain cases, six months after). Any appreciation of its value during the lifetime of the original owner, which can be considerable, escapes taxation.

The inherited property is considered a long-term asset, so when it is sold, any gain is a long-term gain for tax purposes, taxable at lower rates. When reporting such sales on a tax return, it's appropriate to write "inherited" where the form asks for the date of acquisition.

One side note: this situation is likely to change if estate taxes are repealed. As a new law currently proposes, heirs would inherit securities and take over the basis of the original owner. When the assets are sold, then the heirs would owe taxes on the entire appreciation of the property over the years.

Are estate taxes an issue in your planning? Talk to the people with the know-how you need at:

Letters to the editor

Thanks for support

Dear Town Crier Readers,

We thank you for your support! During the May Floods of 2006, the Merrimack Valley Community was the most affected. The Merrimack Valley Chapter of the American Red Cross was present because you made it possible! Through your donations of time, money and resources the American Red Cross in Massachusetts:

- Provided over 26,000 meals and snacks
- Served 336 families
- Sheltered over 200 people and provided three regional shelters for up to ten days
- Distributed over 2,500 clean up kits as well as bulk clean up items distributed (several truck loads of boots, hoses, gloves, ete)
- Over 400 staff members assisted in this disaster- 96% were volunteers

Thanks to all our donors, supporters, volunteers and partners - who are too numerous to name in this letter. The outpouring from the community was truly heartwarming. It is not possible to list here all of the people who gave so generously of their resources, time and money, but we want to thank a few major contributors. Special thanks to our major contributors who assisted In multiple locations: Wal-Mart, Stop & Shop, Demoulas Market Basket, CVS and Ninety Nine Restaurant who donated food and supplies and to Enterprise Bank who channeled $40,122 of donations from community members through their various branches and provided a $25,000 matching gift.

Due to the floods, the Merrimack Valley chapter's resources have been depleted and we need your help in ensuring that our chapter and our community are prepared for the next disaster. It's not a matter of "If" Just a matter of when.

Here at home;

- Our volunteers respond to nearly 100 disasters a year, primarily fires, providing for the immediate needs of food, clothing, shelter, health and mental health services. We respond 24 hours a day every day
- We train over 30,000 people in CPR/First Aid and water safety courses. We need your help to train a lot more.
- We train our communities to be ready to respond to every type of potential disaster. Remember, a community's response to a disaster is only as good as its preparedness.

The American Red Cross exists at your will - the will of the American people. We fulfill our mission of "helping people prevent, prepare for, and respond to emergencies and disasters" through you. Get to know us before you need us - we are 96 percent volunteer workforce and we are a not-for-profit, nongovernmental agency, The Red Cross' motto is "Together, we can save a life." This motto is a call to action for each person to help.

To our supporters, thanks for all you do and keep up the good work. For those who have yet to find a way to help, please call us at 978-372-6871 or visit our website at www.arcmv.org or write to us or visit our office at 177 Ward Hill Avenue, Ward Hilt, MA 01835. If you are interested in donating blood please call 1-800-Give Life. Remember "Together, we can save a life."

Butter and pork

Dear Editor,

While the state funded purchase of the Butters Farm is undoubtedly a noble, "feel good" gesture, it is just another example of the never-ending pork barrel spending by the Massachusetts State Legislature.

If the town wishes to preserve the Butters Farm, it should be done through privately raised funds, not state tax dollars. It is not a necessary function of our state government to fund such a purchase.

There are many challenges facing the residents of Massachusetts today. Rapidly rising property taxes, a voter mandated income tax rollback that the legislature continues to deny the citizens, and one of the highest costs of living in the country are but a few of the problems we have to deal with. Add to that a state legislature that is out of control with irresponsible and wasteful spending, including an unnecessary raiding of the rainy day fund.

We need to reduce government spending, not increase it. This $450,000 appropriation is just one more example of ridiculous pork barrel spending. Suppose every state representative and state senator tacked a half million dollars onto the already bloated state budget - you do the math. Pork barrel spending is government at its worst and hurts everyone.

There is little wonder why this state is losing population. You the taxpayer have to live on a budget - so should local, state and federal governments. When they want to increase spending (and when don't they), they just increase your taxes. When your expenses increase, can you demand and get a raise from your employer? No, you find ways to reduce your spending.

We need more responsible, careful and metered spending of our hard-earned tax dollars.

Voters and taxpayers - it is your money, not theirs. It is time to force them to remove their hand from your pocket.

Fortnight in Review

Summertime, summertime, sum, sum, summertime! My children would sing that song all day long if I taught it to them. Summer is here in all its hot, sticky, thunderstorm, pools, ice cream, mosquito glory. In summer I love to sit and watch the storms.

Growing up on a lake in Maine I used to sit on my dad's big lap in the rocking chair and watch the chain lighting pierce the sky during those fabulous storms. When do we take this kind of time anymore? I rarely get the chance, or make the time.

After the fun events at Livingston Street my kids really got into the summer, school having been out about two weeks. We are reminded of the scrape-y softness of a sandy beach, brain freeze from popsicles, the Floridy smell of sunscreen or a warm parking lot at night. So, like many parents I'll bet, I experienced a bit of cognitive dissonance when Wal-Mart very kindly sent me a back to school flyer.

Come on.

Back to school? School's been out two weeks! It's as if we, as a society or a consumer nation, must think so far ahead that we forget to enjoy the present.

At Homegoods at the Oakdale Plaza, Halloween decorations are already making an appearance. Come September, we'll see Christmas decorations and all the attendant hurry up, rush, spend, spend, spend. It's a consumer nation.

Economically, yes, our economy needs spenders to ensure jobs, GDP, in general economic viability. But I don't have to like it.

This year I'll buy fewer school clothes and supplies prior to the beginning of school and opt instead for purchasing favorites afterwards when they go on sale. Christmas may be harder, but perhaps this year I'll make gifts and purchase bees and sheep from the Heifer Project to donate to suffering third world families. Already my daughter has chosen her Halloween costume from the dress-up trunk in her play space. She'll be a ladybug, a costume a neighbor graciously gave to us last year.

I've donated bags and bags of clothes to thrift shops, the Salvation Army, what have you. But I always hand down children's clothes to friends and happily accept those that come my way.

This summer I've made an effort to schedule some activities for my kids and keep up with all our friends, not just those that live right around the corner. I tried building in plenty of time for relaxation (except when I'm writing of course). I haven't managed to chuck the television yet, but maybe someday. I want my kids to enjoy their summer. Visits to family out of state, bike rides and dog walks and frantic chases down the street to catch the ice cream man. Making the memories is more important. Enjoy your summer, remember some of those magical ones from your youth, those halcyon days of childhood.

Standing Eight Count

I hate going to the doctor.

The hassle starts as soon as you pull into the Lahey Clinic parking lot. Good luck finding a parking spot unless you are fortunate enough to have some sort of physical disability. I counted 56 handicapped spots in the main lot before succumbing to mental fatigue, so God only knows how many are actually there.

I drove all over the main lot to no avail and then likewise prowled the lower lot with similar success. Eventually I was lucky enough to find a spot in Tyngsboro. By the time I had made my way to the building I was lame enough to qualify for disabled parking. Next time I'm just going to park in one of the handicapped spots and then fake a lisp.

The waiting room is a lot of fun. The days of a small town doctor or a general practitioner seem to be a thing of the past. Every doctor is a specialist of some sort these days, which seems to me to be little more than an excuse to herd a large number of people with similar ailments together in one waiting room. That way, in the event of a tragedy, the human gene pool may actually experience some level of improvement. I can see it on the 11 o'clock news.

"Early this morning in an, as yet unexplained tragedy, the roof caved in on the dermatology wing of General Hospital. There were no survivors. In a related story, the medical profession has issued a report this evening indicating a dramatic reduction in the number of reported cases of psoriasis in the state of Massachusetts."

I happen to have asthma and this appointment was my yearly check-up with the Allergist, so there I was stuck in a waiting room with a bunch of phlegm-ridden mouth-breathers waiting for a nurse to call my name.

No one talks to each other in the waiting room - unless of course you are in the psychiatric wing. And in that case most people are simply conversing with their own various personalities. No, in most medical waiting rooms people just spend their time speculating on the potential medical deficiencies of everyone else in the room.

"Check out that guy," they think to themselves with glee. "What a mess. Bet he's allergic to everything. I wish that other freak would cover his mouth when he coughs."

Ideally, you've thought to bring something to read, or else you are stuck choosing between a Newseek from 1983 or this month's Highlights For Children. Sometimes, regardless of how low your standards are, someone has scooped up the very last copy of Halitosis Monthly leaving you with nothing at all. There are very few ways to look more like a dimwit than just sitting in a chair with nothing to read, no one to talk to, and just staring out into space.

Finally, the nurse called my name and brought me in to take my weight and blood pressure. I always feel the need to explain that my weight would be more accurate if I wasn't so overdue for a haircut.

They don't measure my height anymore, which is a real gyp if you ask me. My height I can manage to maintain every year.

I really think the blood pressure test is a crock. The speed at which the nurse squeezes the pump would lead one to believe that there is some sort of interdepartmental competition going on - that also explains her fascination with her watch during the whole process. Next thing you know, the inflatable collar has cut off all circulation to your lower arm and she's pretending to listen to the stethoscope while your hand begins to shrink and curl up like a prune from loss of fluid. I'm convinced that they have music pumped into the ear pieces of those stethoscopes.

Now it's time to see the doctor, right? Nope.

Now it's time to wait in a smaller waiting room (a.k.a. the examining room) for three or four days.

"Strip down to the waist," the nurse orders just before closing the door on you.

There you are...all alone...in a little room with a johnny and a table covered in paper.

No magazines.

Nothing to do.

No indication of when the doctor plans on coming in.

Maybe the nurse forgot to tell him about you.

See, this is one of those times that women have a distinct advantage over men. At least they get to pass the time away by playing with those stirrup things. Not guys. We have to make due with tongue depressors and that thing that shines light into your ear.

I try to resist every single time. I try to sit there on the paper not touching anything, but if the doctor doesn't show within 15 minutes or so, I just kind of figure it is his fault. No one else acquainted with me is comfortable leaving me unsupervised for that long a period of time.

It never fails; the doctor walks in just in time to catch me with a blood pressure collar wrapped around my neck trying to look up my own nose in the mirror while using one of those nostril-spreader-things.

My doctor, by the way, always enters the room stripped down to the waist. He does this, he explains, in an effort to ease the discomfort his patients may experience from having to similarly disrobe. Each year I try to convince him that, in point of fact, my comfort level would drastically improve if he were to wear a shirt, tie, and maybe even a lab jacket, but he insists that I am just trying to be polite and he really doesn't mind at all, etc, etc. Finally we compromise and he puts on a johnny.

Oddly enough, I have to endure an almost identical argument with my dentist every six months, but that's a separate column.

Let's Hear it!! Your Two Cents...

I love our town common! I especially enjoy the fact that it is not in a retail area, but surrounded by schools, homes and the library. It's hard to decide which season is best - summer with the American flags on the poles lining the street or winter with the Christmas tree lights shining.

The next time you are visiting the Wildwood Cemetery please take note of the beautiful bushes surrounding the newest area prepared for future burial lots. The Smith family, of Faulkner Avenue, has been faced with the sad task of razing their parents home. Since the 1930's, three generations of the Lester and Thora (Christensen) Smith family have lived in this home. Since their passing, their family has continued their tradition of keeping the home and yard in meticulous condition. Being faced with the need to take the house down, they wondered what could be done with the 40+ beautifully manicured bushes and shrubs that surrounded their home. Their offer to the Town of Wilmington was graciously accepted and they now beautifully line the perimeter of the newest area at the cemetery. "Nene, Fafa and Uncle Carl" would be pleased that these bushes will continue to bring beauty to those who visit.

To help with ongoing hurricane relief

STAMP going to Biloxi

Members of St. Thomas Church in Wilmington packed boxes of goods to be sent to Hurricane Katrina victims. On July 16th, 17 members of St. Thomas Parish will be traveling to Biloxi, Mississippi to assist in the ongoing efforts of the Gulf Coast to recover from the effects of Hurricane Katrina last summer. STAMP (St. Thomas Appalachian Mountain Project) has traditionally traveled to the rural areas of southern Kentucky and northern Tennessee to upgrade housing for those in need in the Appalachians.

Due to the devastation caused by last summer's hurricanes it was decided that the needs were more pressing in Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana. Media reports and firsthand accounts by members of the Wilmington United Methodist Church and First Baptist Church, both of whom have already traveled to the area this past spring, drove home the message that the area is still in dire need of assistance.

Project directors Agnes Fiumara and Sharon Hanson have been working with staff of the First United Methodist Church in Biloxi in planning the trip. Several local contractors and businesses have donated tools that will be used by the group and then left for future use in Biloxi and the surrounding area. A number of tools were donated by Wilmington resident Margaret Doane in memory of her late husband.

The STAMP team wishes to acknowledge the generosity of the officials at FEDEX in Wilmington who have agreed to ship the tools at no expense to STAMP. The savings will enable STAMP to purchase additional building supplies as they are needed.

St. Thomas' Parish conducts several fundraisers each year to support this project, including the Annual STAMP Dance at Villanova Hall. Donations for future endeavors can be sent to STAMP C/O Fr. Philip Earley at 121 Middlesex Av Wilmington 01887.

interviews: Lisa Teichner, Fresh Air Fund Eastern Massachusetts Fund Representative. Local host families and their New York City visitors.

The Funds Eastern Massachusetts volunteers invite local host families and their New York City visitors to enjoy a barbeque, ice cream and cake donated by Putnam Pantry, a children's barnyard, the Kidstown play area, activity fields, and acres of gardens and trails.

The Fund's Friendly Town program has enabled New York City children from low income neighborhoods to escape the crowded city streets for two weeks or more each summer since 1877. Fresh Air children visit volunteer host families in rural and suburban communities in 13 northeastern states and Canada. Throughout the summer, many Fresh Air children will return to the same families whom they have visited during previous summers. Others will spend two weeks away from their New York City homes for the first time.

dents that expanded our typical curriculum."

Not to be confused with bio diesel - a chemically altered fuel that requires a permit to make and uses ethanol or methanol and lye to create a highly flammable (as well as toxic) substance, the dual-fuel system requires the car to run on diesel until the engine reaches a temperature of 150 degrees Fahrenheit at which point a switch is thrown and the fuel source changes to WVO. A driver must switch back to diesel five minutes before shutting down in order to avoid the WVO clogging fuel injectors when it cools.

"We began mechanically in September and completed our first successful test run the first week of June," said Havens who added that WVO vehicles typically see a 35% increase in power but a 10% decrease in fuel economy. "There are a number of kits available, but we wanted to do this as inexpensively as possible and manufacture all parts in house."

As a result, the project has become a school-wide endeavor. Four different vocational-technical programs have participated including Culinary Arts (providing the vegetable oil), Metal Fabrication (producing the WVO tank), Commercial Art and Design (creating the car's decals) and Graphic Arts (printing business cards to distribute to local businesses that produce WVO). The total cost of the project was $230.

To date, the 1983 Mercedes has traveled 80 miles on four gallons of WVO - that includes an hour-and-a-half operating in the Diesel Shop prior to road testing. While Havens estimates that to purchase a gallon of 'new' vegetable oil at a store would cost roughly $5 a gallon - higher (for now) than a gallon of gas, the Shawsheen instructor has found a free source for WVO.

A Wendy's store in Derry, New Hampshire, has agreed to provide Havens with up to 80 gallons of free waste oil courtesy of its fry-o-lators. Typically, the fast food store produces 50 gallons of waste oil every two to two-and-a-half days.

"It's cleaner for the environment and it's cheaper," said Shawsheen Tech sophomore Teddy Gannon of Billerica, who estimates that 13 gallons of WVO can be cleaned with a $3.65 filter putting the cost of the donated WVO at a measly 28 cents a gallon.

"It's amazing that what is a hazardous waste at restaurants can be used in a positive way," added classmate Brian McCarthy of Burlington.

Havens credits Virginio Mendonca of Chelmsford as a mentor on the project. Mendonca owns several WVO vehicles and has become an expert in the field. In addition to conducting a seminar for the students, Mendonca was a constant resource for the students and staff.

Both Jimmy Murrin of Bedford and Michael Prekop of Tewksbury expected the conversion to be overwhelming, but the Shawsheen Tech students ended up amazed that it was something they could actually complete.

"Surprisingly, it was easy to convert using basic items," said Prekop. "When I first heard of the assignment, I thought that this was too much for us as sophomores to handle, but we did it!"

The success of the Shawsheen Tech project has caught the attention of the community. Kelley Construction of Billerica is in the process of converting at least two pieces of diesel equipment to an alternative-fuel system.

"With the volatility of fuel prices, WVO might become more and more mainstream," said Havens, "and as demand rises for more alternative powered vehicles,— Shawsheen Tech's Diesel Mechanic students will be ready with the necessary skills and knowledge to meet that demand."

Tragedy on Brown St.

By ANDREA MACMULLIN

TEWKSBURY - A warm, sunny summer afternoon turned tragic for a female motorcyclist as she made her way through the back roads of Tewksbury.

A fatal motorcycle crash claimed the life of a Chelmsford woman on Sunday after she slammed into a tree off Brown Street. Forty-seven year old Diane Hennigan appears to have lost control of the motorcycle she was operating during the late afternoon hours, just before 6:00 p.m.

Hennigan was taken by ambulance to Saints Memorial Medical Center in Lowell while emergency crews worked to save her. A MedFlight helicopter was dispatched, but did not transport Hennigan to Boston. She was pronounced dead at the hospital.

The accident is under investigation, with the State Police Reconstructive Team trying to determine the circumstances surrounding the single vehicle accident.

"We certainly suspect speed (to be a factor)," said Deputy Police Chief Timothy Sheehan.

According to Sheehan, witnesses said Hennigan passed three vehicles before crossing the solid yellow line while traveling west on Brown Street.

One witness, the operator of one of the vehicles Hennigan passed, estimated that Hennigan was traveling approximately 45-50 miles per hour when she passed her.

"I don't think the road conditions were a factor in this particular accident," said Sheehan. Brown Street has a curve in the road where many vehicles and motorcycles often speed through.

Sheehan said he is not aware of other fatalities that have occurred on Brown Street.

A portion of the street was closed temporarily as police investigated the accident scene.

charged with assault-and-battery with a dangerous weapon (a knife); assault-and-battery, and malicious destruction to a motor vehicle.

He was arraigned at Fourth District Court Monday, and released on personal recognizance, a court spokeswoman said. Najjar's case was continued to August 21, the spokeswoman said.

Initially, after the incident, Najjar was held in the Burlington lock-up without bail because of the seriousness of the incident, said Burlington Police Sgt. Timothy McDonough.

Butters Farm

During a weekend press conference, Romney criticized the legislature's budget for taking $550 million out of the state's rainy-day fund.

Romney has been accused of issuing the vetoes as a political move to foster his reputation as a fiscal conservative. Miceli, however, says the move demonstrates the distance that exists between himself and the communities of the Commonwealth.

"The Governor always talks about these projects being 'pork' and he vetoed almost every local appropriation, but we legislators are in close contact with our constituents and we know what is most important to them," Miceli said.

Wilmington legislators, along with roughly 90 other Massachusetts lawmakers whose communities were affected by the vetoes, will be working on veto-override strategies.

"I met with the Speaker and the Chairman of Ways & Means for two hours last week just in case this happened," Miceli said. "We'll be working on a methodology for overriding the veto, though it's easier said than done."

Historically, Romney's vetoes have been susceptible to legislative overrides. All but .8 percent of last year's vetoes were overridden.

"We'll do this one way or another," Miceli said.

The future of the Butters Farm was threatened by new development in early 2005 when local developer Joseph Langone entered into an agreement to purchase the five-acre property. Langone, who realized the full historic value of the dilapidated farmhouse only after agreeing to purchase the land, met with members of Wilmington's Historical Commission and with Town officials to develop strategies for saving the structure.

About Butters Farm:

The Butters Farmhouse was built in 1682 and is the oldest unchanged dwelling in Wilmington.

William Butter of Scotland came over to the New World sometime between 1630 and 1692, but not necessarily by choice. As a prisoner of the infamous Oliver Cromwell, William was sold into the New World as an indentured servant. Once his debt was paid off, he settled in Wilmington.

William Butter II (later known as Butters) utilized the property to raise oxen and built the Butters Farm in 1682. He sired ten children who subsequently built their own homes throughout the immediate area, which soon became known as "Butters' Row."

William Butters II was elected one of Wilmington's first Selectmen in 1731.

John Butters, grandson to William II, was one of 14 members of the Butters family to fight in the Revolutionary War. Descendants of the first William Butters, as a matter of fact, have served bravely in most of the major wars fought by the United States.

James Butters, also a grandson of William II lived in the Butters Farm. He served as one of Wilmington's Minutemen during the Revolutionary War and attained some measure of fame by being noted in "Ripley's Believe it or Not" for trading a team of oxen for a wife.

Direct descendants of William Butters II still reside in Wilmington, but the Butters' Farm was sold outside of the family during the early 1960's.

On June 10th and 11th, at a meet in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Kimo competed against 40 dogs from all over, including New York City, the New Hampshire State Police, and many cities and towns throughout New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Undaunted by the impressive competition Kimo earned second place in the Open Class Suspect Search.

In a meet on June 24th Kimo earned first place in Obedience, 3rd in Agility, 3rd in Article Search (a simulated evidence recovery search) and 2nd in overall score. In the Team competition Kimo and officer Palmer earned 1st place.

But it's not all about certifications and competition. Kimo and Officer Palmer train with the Boston Police Department and trainer Troy Casey, work regular shifts out of Wilmington, and often cooperate with other municipalities when police departments need help.

"All K9 units work different shifts," explained Palmer, so teams cover for each other when units are off. "Sometimes we go several weeks without anything and then three or four things in a row. Its feast or famine."

Loaned out by request to Tewksbury, Reading, Woburn, and Stoneham, to name a few, Kimo quickly made a name for himself.

In Stoneham Kimo tracked a burglary suspect to a pile of debris behind a shed.

One night this past winter, Wilmington's entire shift was dispatched to a breaking and entering in progress at a commercial property on Ballardvale Street. A security guard had observed a suspect breaking into tractor trailers and then subsequently into a building undergoing construction.

Police arrived on the scene, apprehended the suspect from the back of the building, and sent Kimo in for evidence recovery. He promptly returned with one of the suspect's gloves used in committing the crime.

"(Kimo) disappeared for a moment while I was talking with another officer," said Palmer. "He went behind the dumpsters and got the other glove."

"Our trainer always says 'trust the dog, trust the dog.' There is no man or machine that can do what a tracking dog can do," Palmer said.

Trusting the dog is key for all handlers, understanding the capabilities enough to know that oftentimes the dog knows better than the people do. When a child went missing in Tewksbury, family and neighbors insisted that the youngster had left the neighborhood. Kimo tracked the child's scent down the street then turned around and tracked back along, over a fence, and right to the shed standing behind the family's house.

"I asked the family if they had checked the shed," Palmer said.

Though insisting that the child must have left the area, the family opened the shed and found their son.

Trust the dog, indeed.

Occasionally Kimo searches for narcotics in schools.

"He's searched in Tewksbury, Dracut, Chelmsford, Malden, and South Boston," said Palmer.

Typically trainer Casey sends out an email to all the units that train with him soliciting units for a particular school that is planning a search. Some schools search lockers or parking lots or both. In Chelmsford Kimo found marijuana in a vehicle.

"When one dog finds something you see if a second dog reacts the same way," Palmer explains. The second dog confirms the suspicion, which authorizes a vehicle search.

Dogs don't just search cars.

"On a warrant search with the drug task force, Kimo found a hidden wall-safe with cocaine, heroin and a gun in Woburn."

"It's unreal. It's hard to describe," Palmer commented, referring to how well police dogs perform their jobs and Kimo in particular.

Though Kimo lives with Palmer, he is not treated as a pet. Born in the Czech Republic, Kimo is part of a legacy of German Shepherd Dogs bred specifically for police work. "Most dogs in the United States are bred more for looks," Officer Palmer explained. Dogs from Europe, when purchased by police departments and law enforcement agencies at 14 months to 2 years old, have all the qualities needed in a police dog.

Kimo spends 40 hours a week in the car with Palmer. When not working he's in his kennel at Palmer's home in Methuen or taking a walk with Palmer's pet, a Labrador retriever. When Kimo sees Palmer's uniform though, he runs for the cruiser. He really knows his work.

"He has to be treated as a professional."

Officer Palmer became involved as the K9 officer only two years ago when Chief Spencer brought back the program, which had been cancelled in the mid-eighties.

"My father, Jay Palmer, was the first K9 handler in Wilmington in 1960," Palmer said.

Back then, K9 units were just beginning police work and Officer Jay Palmer and his dog, Zip, made lots of finds and suspect apprehensions. While he only had his dog for two years before being promoted, Officer Jay Palmer's experience had a profound effect on his son.

"It's just really, really rewarding," said Palmer, explaining why he does this work. "I can't think of anything else I'd rather do in law enforcement."

Palmer points to the support he and Kimo receive from colleagues as the reason for Kimo's success.

"Guys go out of their way to help me, offer to help me," Palmer said. "One will go out in the woods to hide or assist in training. They all love Kimo, all know what he's capable of."

Palmer is aware of other towns that don't enjoy the same level of support for their K9 units. Clearly in Wilmington the spirit of cooperation pays off.

Chainsaw accident in Tewksbury

Tree worker MedFlighted to hospital

By JAYNE W. MILLER

TEWKSBURY - Roland Johnson, 36, of Shapleigh, Maine, nearly severed his hand while pruning trees with a chainsaw on Friday. He was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital via Boston MedFlight helicopter.

The call came into the fire department at 12:17 p.m., according to Fire Chief Richard Mackey. Engine Two responded to the scene where a male patient was holding his left hand. Mr. Johnson's injury was wrapped in bandages before he was transported to a landing zone at the State Hospital in town, one of five established landing zones in Tewksbury.

MedFlight was notified quickly as it was a "pretty bad injury," stated Chief Mackey.

"His hand was cut nearly to the bone," said Mackey

According to MedFlight spokesperson Suzanne Wedel, it typically takes MedFlight 4 to 5 minutes to get into the air once they receive a call. MedFlight typically transports 3,000 patients a year and has made 4 trips to Tewksbury over the last year.

Mr. Johnson is an employee of Urban Tree Service, a 16-year-old grounds keeping and tree health company out of Rochester, NH. Johnson incurred his injury while raised 30 feet in a basket pruning trees at a private home at 33 Nichols Street, according to Mackey.

His condition was not available.

An unidentified employee of Urban Tree Services stated, "We have absolutely no comment."

Jeff Erskine, Area Director for the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, indicated that OSHA visited the scene and stated that an investigation "is ongoing at this time."

Tewksbury police are also conducting an investigation.

Female Golfer striving in the sport

Still a Wie way to go for teenage phenom

By LOUIE CIMAGLIA
Sports Correspondent

Golf has been around forever. It is tough for the sport to find a new fan base and to expand at this point in it's history. To reach a fanbase centered around women and youth is the ideal goal, but difficult to achieve. Enter Michelle Wie the 17-year-old girl who has a game that puts a lot of the guys on the PGA tour to shame.

But her meteoric rise to stardom has been stymied by one little problem – Wie hasn't won anything yet. And it seems that her main focus is pressing to qualify for a major tournament for the PGA.

Wouldn't it make more sense for Wie to stay in the LPGA and get herself acclimated with a pro tour? She should become a force in the LPGA and then try to crossover to male tournaments. She is great for golf, no question about that.

And she would add a great deal of drama to tournaments. She has the talent to win tournaments against men, but not right now.

She should follow Annika Sorenstam and become the premiere female golfer in the world. Then when she reaches that status is when she should play with the boys. But right now she is hurting herself. And frankly, it's annoying.

Hearing about every hole in the U.S. Open qualifier was a bit much. Her media storm is massive, but could be doing better things.

Wie has such star power right now that she could single handedly lift the LPGA onto a national stage, creating drama between Sorenstam and herself. Wie could be doing a public service by becoming the Tiger Woods of her domain.

In her defense, it's not fair to be saying she should be winning majors. She is only a teenager. However, she has talent that any golfer could only dream about. She is ready to win a major, she just needs the mental toughness that accompanies any great golfer.

And she can get that by spending a few years on the LPGA tour.

Golf is becoming more and more trendy amongst the youth of America. Young people are paying attention to golf and have an interest.

Michelle Wie is the first person out of generation X to reach the spotlight in the golf world. She is what this generation can relate with and root for.

Hopefully one day there is a televised event with Michelle Wie and Tiger Woods playing one-on-one golf on ESPN. The world will stop and watch like Germany at the World Cup. There will be a pregame show and awesome commercials in-between.

Golf will finally become a television spectacle. And I can finally throw the golf party I've been planning. But I'm going to need a little help. This will only happen if Wie takes a different path in her career.

She needs to go to the LPGA, establish herself, become a champion, then play with the guys. The golf world needs Michelle Wie, but they're going to have to wait.

Finishes with a 96 in Iowa competition

Peabody takes home national championship

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

The golfing career of Wilmington's Keith Peabody has truly been a remarkable progression in recent years. The 39-year-old has gone from being a talented but raw golfer into a championship force on the national level.

Peabody's most recent accomplishment may have been his most impressive to date, as he took the gold medal in the Special Olympics Level 5, Division 2 in Ames, Iowa last week.

It was the second year in a row that Peabody has won gold, but this year's win was even more special as he was facing the best of the best in the United States, while last year's event was an invitational.

Peabody has been golfing for many years, primarily at the Billerica Country Club under the tutelage of club pro Barrie Bruce, and has won numerous tournaments including last year's Massachusetts Special Olympics Tournament, but this win is one that will stand out among the rest.

"This was the best win I have had," Peabody said. "I played even better than last year."

It was the third and final day of competition when Peabody was at his best, posting a clutch performance for the ages.

Entering the final round of play in Division 2 he trailed the leader, 21-year-old David Steffan on Nebraska by 12 strokes, but a combination of Steffan struggling and Peabody playing a great round of 96 earned him the victory and the gold medal.

"I picked a good time to play some of my best golf," Peabody said. "I was on my game. I played much better than I did the first two days."

Pulling off the victory may have surprised Peabody's opponents as well as fans, but the man himself was not exactly stunned by his performance.

"I felt like I had a chance to win," Peabody said. "It was a good feeling and a good experience. I felt like I played really well."

Peabody had plenty of support in his quest for gold, and there has been nobody more supportive than his mother Marge, who along with providing moral support also coached Keith as well as the four other golfers who made the trip to Iowa.

For Marge, it was great as a coach to see Keith do so well, but as a mother it was even more thrilling just to see her son on the course doing something he loves.

"It is so special to see him play," Marge said. "I love the game myself and that's how he got into it, but of course now he's ten times better than me. For Keith it is a passion and it really enhances his quality of life."

Among the other supporters for Peabody are his co-workers at Market Basket in Wilmington where he has worked for several years.

"We went to Market Basket when we got back and Keith was walking down one of the aisles and people were cheering for him," Marge said. "They have been wonderful to him, and they are so happy for him."

Along with the obvious joy of winning the gold medal, the whole experience of being at the Games was also a great experience for Peabody.

"It was a great time. I had a blast," Peabody said. "I got to see a lot of the other events and a lot of entertainment. They did a nice job."

Up next for Peabody is the Massachusetts Special Olympics Tournament from August 11-13. Peabody is the defending champion in the event and will be looking to continue his strong play with the local competition.

"I think I will do well," Peabody said. "I hope I can win it again."

Seven players among state championship girls soccer team

By DAN IGO
Sports Correspondent

Seven Wilmington girls started off their summer break on the right foot, as they were members of the Burlington United Under-19 state soccer championship team.

Teresa DeSimone, Caitlin Foley, Debbie Lyons, Caitlin McNabb, Ryan Murphy, Jackie Rideout and Kat Strazzere were praised by head coach Matt Cotter as not only great contributors on the field, but great people off of it.

"Not only were these seven fine soccer players, but I have to stress they were fine young ladies too," said Cotter. "You could see they were great friends together, but they also blended in nicely with the other members of the team and made it a lot of fun."

The United competed in the Middlesex Youth Soccer League (MYSL). This year the United was comprised of high school juniors, seniors, and college freshmen. The team represented the MYSL at the Tournament of Champions at UMass-Amherst on June 23-25, which is the state tournament.

The championship game was held on June 25th, and the Wilmington members of the United figured prominently. Lyons – the 2005 Town Crier Female Athlete of the Year – scored two goals, with Rideout assisting on both. Rideout and Lyons also picked up assists on the third goal of the game. Burlington ended up defeating Pepperell 3-1 to take the title. This type of offense was typical of the seasons Lyons and Rideout had.

"I can't say enough about what they brought to the team," Rideout said. "Debbie and Jackie were the forwards and with the numbers each put up, they were the offense. Debbie had eight of our eleven goals in the tournament and Jackie assisted on seven of the goals. Debbie had one of the best scoring performances over the course of the state tournament that I've ever witnessed."

However, a strong offense also needs a strong defenses to support it. Burlington had a very strong defense, and it was anchored by Foley, Murphy, and DeSimone. Cotter had strong praise for all three of his defenders from Wilmington.

"Caitlin was the anchor of the defense," he said. "She was the sweeper, the last line of defense, and she was invaluable, playing every minute of the state tournament. Ryan was my stopper and Teresa was one of my outside marking fullbacks. They both did an excellent job at marking the other team's forwards and shutting down the opposing offense."

Midfielders might be the hardest working players on the field. They are expected to be able to both attack on offense and come back to help on defense. Strazzere and McNabb were two center midfielders for the United. Cotter said their play was irreplacable to the team.

"They controlled the middle of the field," he said. "They really played well off of each other. In soccer, a game can really be won or lost in the midfield. Because of Kat and Caitlin's strong play at winning balls, transitioning play from our defense to our offense, and slowing the other team's attack, they helped us win a lot of games."

This was Cotter's 14th year coaching the team, and he's losing a lot of players from this year's team. In fact, this was his largest graduating class. However, he still loves to coach, and would gladly come back, if wanted.

"If we have enough girls and they want me back, then of course I (would come back)," he said. "If this was the team's swan song, then I had a great run. I've had some outstanding teams and met a lot of fine young ladies. This would have been a fantastic way to end things."

Fitness Together debuts in North Reading

Local resident opens client friendly gym

By ROB CUZZI
Sports Correspondent

Success is known to spill throughout Wilmington, however one town over a Wilmington resident has done quite well for herself.

Driving down Main Street in North Reading is one of those pleasant surprising sits snug in the middle of a small strip mall. Karen Mulik, a WHS graduate of 1994 has opened a client friendly gym, called Fitness Together.

After graduating from WHS, Mulik attended UMass Lowell and then started her career first working six years at RMA Fitness in Woburn. Mulik said it was that experience in the field, that helped lead her to opening and running her own gym.

"From cardio to personal training, RMA Fitness helped open the door to the basic essentials of healthy exercising," she said.

Mulik said there's nothing better than seeing people strive in the gym, no matter what their individual taste is.

"I enjoy helping people and I like working with different fitness levels," she said. "We get a lot of people that are athletic and want to work on certain sport related exercises. At the same time we get people who could be obese and need to lose weight and they are all treated the same."

Since the gym has opened in January of this year, it has enjoyed a thriving count of people who jump at the chance to apply. The gym is a small paradise that gives its clients a comfortable area to establish a solid condition.

Fitness Together predicates itself on supplying their client with only one trainer, and one fulfilling goal, to be healthy and feel good doing it. No matter what you are looking for, whether it is from treadmills to dumbbells, Fitness Together answers the bell.

Not only is the facility equipped with a plethora of equipment based needs, but it is also clean and safe for the new gym entrepreneur or the veteran gym rat. The gym itself is much more individualized then the typical gyms and there's no wait for certain work out machines as they are all free for access.

Mulik stresses that Fitness Together is a hands on gym that supplies its customer with a helping hand from one of four of their trainers to ensure a safe and challenging work out regimen. Not only does the client feel like they can come to the gym and feel relieved to know that what they do at the gym is their business, they can schedule when they can come in and do their exercises. Also, they can not slip and decide to take the week off and lose ambition as some do at other gyms.

"It is almost like a doctor appointment, in the scheduling, the client has a slotted time to come and train," said Mulik.

Each week Mulik can expect somewhere from 90 to 100 sessions between her 40 clients, with varying degrees of athleticism, who all share a common goal of becoming better aware in the world of fitness. One of her clients is Jenn Ford, who was the assistant principal at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington. She seemed captivated by the environment at the gym and had nothing but high praise for the establishment.

"It is so individualized, I don't have to worry about anything here, I can just work out and feel good doing it," said Ford.

Not only is personal strength a concern at the gym, but a constant reminded of a strong cardio vascular routine is recommended at the fitness center. An option to her clients, Mulik and her staff have set up obstacles that they want each member to complete at their choice. This competitive yet fun atmosphere includes Everest which works on conditioning on the treadmills, and strengthens cardio core.

In the summer months comes another challenge which is called the Egyptian pyramid is another level of the conditioning for those who want to test the boundaries as to where they can go condition wise.

Currently staffed with three of the best personal trainers in the area, Amy Trahan, CPT/Nutritionist of Haverhill, MA; Michelle MacKinnon, CPT, of Salem, NH and Ellen DiGioia, CPT of Arlington, MA, Fitness Together's schedule is filling up quickly.

"The clients love it, we have a blast but we also get a lot done," Mulik said with a smile. "And who said that exercise couldn't be fun?"

If you're interested in learning more about Fitness Together, please contact the studio at (978) 276-0799 for an appointment.

Tewksbury residents help Alley Cats sweep tourney in Cooperstown, NY

The Mass. Alley Cats U16 AAU baseball team played near perfect baseball sweeping a tournament held at Cooperstown Baseball World in Oneonta, NY during the last week of June. They outscored their opponents 27-0, hurled back-to-back no hitters, played flawless defense, and outhit their opponents by a wide margin.

The Alley Cats took the first game against the Los Angeles Stampede, 11 - 0. Scott Oberg of Tewksbury earned the victory, giving up just one hit, with one inning of relief help from Taro Gold of Belmont. The Cats put this one away early exploding for ten runs in the second inning. Mark Lane of Tyngsboro led the way with three hits. Mike Ferriero of Tewksbury and Oberg had two hits apiece. Mike DelPonte of Tewksbury, Gold, and Chris Walker of Hollis, NH, each added a hit.

The Alley Cats won the second game easily, once again, by the same score, 11-0, against the Granite (NH) Heat. Kurt Berthiaume of Andover earned the win with one inning of relief help from Chris Sartori of Andover. Another big second inning (seven runs) quickly sealed the victory. Ferriero, Lane and Sartori each had two hits in this one to lead a 10-hit attack. Walker, Berthiaume, Oberg, and DelPonte also contributed big hits.

Game three was a totaly different affair. This one was all about pitching and defense. The Alley Cats sqeaked by the Fallston (MD) Cubs by a score of 1-0. DJ Kechler of the Cubs and Mark Lane matched up in a great pitching duel. Lane fired a no hitter with one inning of relief help from Oberg who closed out the game.

The Alley Cats scored their lone run on a fielder's choice by Jon Smart of Belmont. Kechler did a great job quieting the hot Alley Cats hitters allowing only three hits, a double and a bunt single by Walker, and a double by Gold. Outstanding defense was played by the Alley Cats in this one.

The Alley Cats earned the championship by defeating the South Maryland Tigers, 4-0 in the tournament finale. Walker hurled the team's second straight no hitter against a very good South Maryland team. The Alley Cats took advantage of two first inning errors and a double by Berthiaume to grab a one-run lead.

It remained that way untill the top of the fifth when the Cats added three more runs. Oberg and DelPonte started the inning off with base hits. Jim Albano of Medford got on on an error by the shortstop. The South Maryland pitcher came undone at this point. Two walks and two wild pitches followed leading to the three runs. The play of the game came in the bottom of the fourth with the Alley Cats clinging to a one run lead. The South Maryland leadoff batter got on via a walk and was moved over to second by a sacrifice bunt. The next batter hit a fly ball to straight away center field. On the catch the South Maryland runner tagged up and headed for third. Center fielder Lane made a perfect throw to third baseman, Gold, nailing the runner trying to advance, and killing the only scoring opportunity the South Maryland team could mount in the game.

The Alley Cats' roster consists of: Chris Walker (Hollis, NH), Scott Oberg (Tewksbury), Jon Smart (Belmont), Chris Sartori (Andover), Mike DelPonte (Tewksbury), Jim Albano (Medford), Mark Lane (Tyngsboro), Mike Ferriero (Tewksbury), Kurt Berthiaume (Andover), and Taro Gold (Belmont). Coaches, Paul Sartori and Frank Ferriero.

Tigers take AAA championship

Congratulations to the AAA Minor League Tigers for winning the Tewksbury Town Championship after beating the Braves 17-1 and 6-2.

Both teams played exciting baseball in the deciding game at Sullivan field. Matt Lucia pitched five strong innings striking out twelve batters. Alec Pacheco came on in relief to nail down the win in the sixth inning. Nick Constantineau was the offensive catalyst with two hits including a fifth inning triple.

Other players to reach base safely multiple times were Bobby Briggs, Brennan Moccio, Jared Martin, Alec Pacheco and Tom Pothier.

The defense played flawless ball and robbed the Braves of hits on many occasions. Eric Ell led the infield at shortstop. John Costa played the entire game behind the plate and threw out a batter attempting to bunt. Tom Pothier did not let anything by him at first base. Jared Martin made a nice play at second base to end an inning and receive a high five from pitcher Matt Lucia. Mike Indelicato played solidly at the hot corner. Peter Murray, Jamaal Choudhary and Garrett Connolly anchored a solid outfield, hitting the cutoff men and backing up each other.

It was the culmination of a great season by the Tigers who finished at 10-1 during the regular season.

Prior to this series the Tigers beat the Red Sox two out of three games to reach the World Series. Each of the three games was a real classic and decided by a single run. All three games were low scoring pitchers duals. Eric Ell, Alec Pacheco, Matt Lucia and Mike Indelicato all contributed to a great effort on the mound. The defense was the story of the series with runners being thrown out on the bases and double plays ending any hopes of a Red Sox rally.

The Tigers celebrated the Championship win by parading the Tewksbury Town Champion flag around Sullivan field while the parents and other spectators cheered. Congratulations again to the Tigers for a great season. You truly are all champions.

On Sunday afternoon the Wilmington AAA All-Star Baseball team took on the AA team in a terrific battle which included many great defensive plays such as this one at the hot corner of third base.

All-Star teams battle at Rotary Park

By LOUIE CIMAGLIA
Sports Correspondent

On a hot sunny Sunday afternoon, the AAA baseball all-stars took on the AA all-stars and came away with a 12-5 victory. Held at Rotary Park, the two teams were ready early on for a terrific clash and normally, the older team always beats the younger one pretty handily. But in this case, the game was much closer than the score indicates.

The AA team jumped out to an early 1-0 lead on a Marco Zappalla RBI. But the AAA team stormed back in the bottom of the first with three runs of their own on a bases clearing triple.

The scoring was halted for the next two innings, but the AAA All-Stars exploded for three more runs, overshadowing the one run scored by the AA team in the top of the inning.

The fifth inning was the most exciting as the AA team clawed back to a 6-5 ballgame with some hits and some good baserunning and some good fundamental baseball proving why they are All-Stars. A nice catch on a deep fly to center ended the threat.

Then the AAA team found the bats again and managed six more runs throughout the rest of the game.

Some great defense was played also, including a great double play turned by the AA team.

Playing for the AA: Joe Ascolese of the Braves, Chris Barczak of the Mets, Joe Bolognese of the Mets, Pat Brazell of the Angels, Ryan Carroccino of the Devil Rays, Adam Coccoluto of the Phillies, Cody Cramptom of the Rockies, Mike Curtis of the Padres, Anthony Deniso of the Rockies, Nick DiStephano of the Padres, Kody Dunnett of the Phillies, Dan Fothergill of the Cardinals, Tyler Frasier of the Cardinals, Alex Pizette of the Devil Rays, Tom Townsend of the Angels, and Marco Zappalla of the Braves.

The AAA and AA All-Star baseball teams congratulated one another after a well played game by both sides on Sunday afternoon held at the Rotary Park.

Lentini shows off power to win HR contest

By LOUIE CIMAGLIA
Sports Correspondent

On Monday night the likes of Ryan Howard, Miguel Cabrera and Big Papi David Ortiz took part in the Major League Baseball Home Run Derby. A day earlier Wilmington has its own power hitters with the likes of Carlton Lentini and the town's own Bash Brothers, Steve and Rob McIsaac all putting on impressive power shows.

Different than the MLB derby, the Wilmington Little League program has two rounds of play with each batter getting ten outs in the first round. Every swing that does not result in a dinger is an out. In the second round, the top five contestants from the first round start again, with five outs.

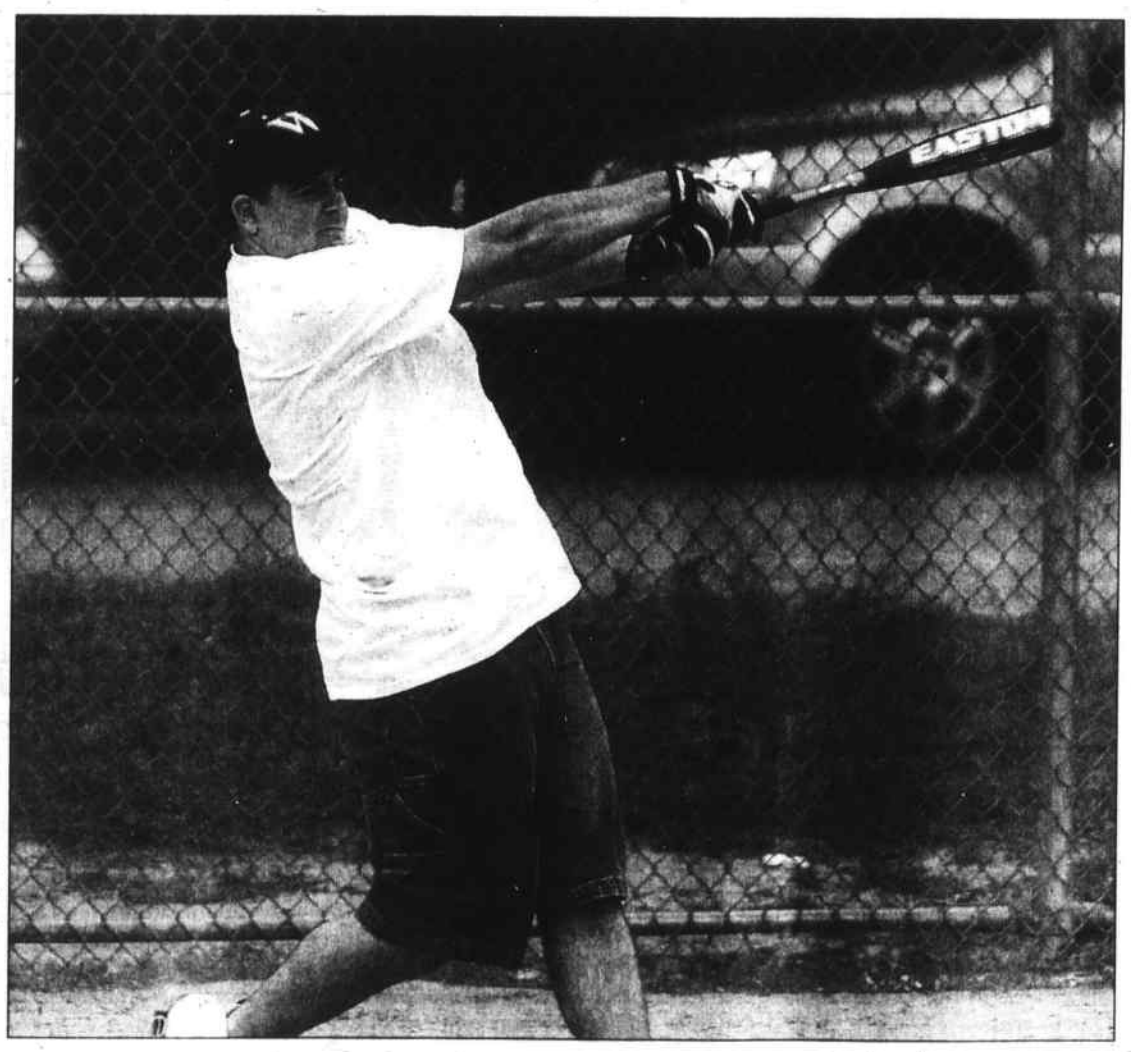
Lentini put on a show in the first round, sending 17 baseballs over the fence. Steve and Rob McIsaac knocked out enough to move on and so did Brian Svennson and Kyle Lunt.

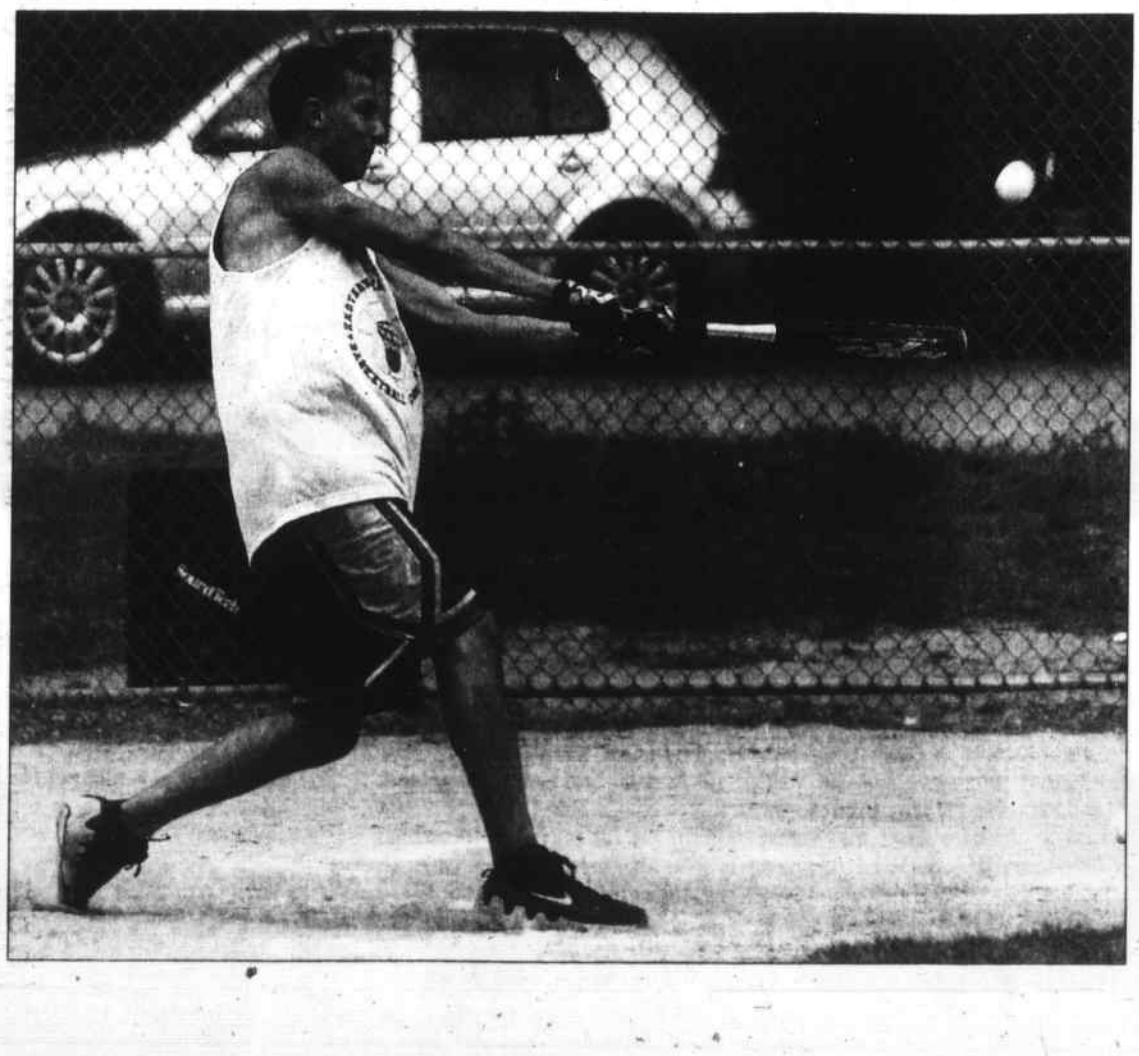
Justyn Logudice, Tom Barry, Kevin Skinner, Dave Rak, Ernie Mello, Mike Enwright, Matt Bibeau, Alan Dooley, Eric Siegel, Keith Quigley, Corey Tobin, and others participated as well, making this year one of the largest fields ever.

In the second round, Lentini put out the most again, making him the winner. Rob McIsaac came in second, and there was a tie for third between Steve McIsaac and Svennsson. It was decided by a contest with only two outs, most homers wins. McIsaac put on possibly the best show of the day with 15 homers with only two outs. Svennsson did hit about eight, but just couldn't top McIsaac.

And for the record, this writer also participated in the event and smacked ... one home run ... one lousy round-tripper. Please don't get me started.

As awful of a showing as that was, the ten years this writer and many teammates and other 16-year-olds who went through ten years of playing in the Wilmington Little League program was the complete opposite. The ten years were some of the best memories of our lives and we all can't thank all of the countless number of volunteers who made that possible, and who made Sunday's event happen.





On Sunday the annual Wilmington Little League Home Run contest for the 16-year-old players who will be leaving the program was held at Rotary Park. Above Kevin Skinner takes a cut at a pitch and below Matt Bibeau does the same.

Letter to the Sports Editor

Wilmington Youth Lacrosse says thank you

Dear Jamie:

The Wilmington Youth Lacrosse Association just completed its second season to great success. Participation in the program increased over 60% from our first season, three more teams were added at the youth level and an Under 9 instructional program was started with close to 30 first and second graders participating in the sport for the first time.

The excitement with the kids at the youth level is overwhelming and, with the successful start-up this year of the High School Girls and High School Boys Junior Varsity Lacrosse programs, it is great to see that lacrosse is alive and well in Wilmington. None of this however could have been possible without the very generous support of so many within the community.

Wilmington Youth Lacrosse Association would like to thank once again the Town of Wilmington, The Wilmington Department of Public Works, the Wilmington Public Schools and the Wilmington School Committee, the Shawsheen Valley Technical High School, the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce and the Wilmington Business Community as a whole who contributed so generously either financially or with their services to support both the youth and high school programs.

We would like to thank the Wilmington Youth Soccer Association, the Wilmington Youth Hockey Association and the Wilmington Little League who supported our efforts this past year. We would also like to thank all the personal supporters and contributors who have donated so generously to help grow both the youth and high school programs and provide an opportunity for the players.

And finally we would like to thank the coaches, the parents and the players who made this second youth season and the first high school season such a success. We realize the growth, the success and the ability to provide a program for the youth of Wilmington is as a result of the support we receive from the community. We thank you.

Have a safe, fun and relaxing summer.

Best Regards,
Board of Directors

Grey Ghosts scare off Wildcat Northeast Baseball team

By DAN IGO
Sports Correspondent

From start to finish, controversy was the theme Sunday night at North Intermediate Field when the Wilmington Wildcats played host to the Westford Academy Grey Ghosts in Northeast League baseball action.

The game started 20 minutes late due to a delay, apparently because the two umpires were listening to the marathon Red Sox game in the parking lot. Tensions were high between the umpires and Wilmington coach Don Foley throughout the game, and eventually culminated with Foley being thrown out in the sixth inning. Wilmington ultimately lost the game 7-2.

The incident in question occurred with one out in the sixth. David Rak hit a hard groundball to the pitcher, who threw to second to get the force. The shortstop then went to first and got Rak out on a very close play. That was the tipping point for Foley, who deemed the call "embarrassing." He was given the toss soon after.

Wilmington started the game off strong. Starting pitcher Kevin Skinner walked three in the first, but got out of the inning unscathed after a strong strikeout. In the bottom half of the inning, Eric Legro drive in Ernie Mello with an RBI single to left field, and Wilmington got on the board first with the score 1-0.

Westford Academy took the lead in the second, despite Skinner only giving up one hit. Two errors doomed the Wildcats, and the Grey Ghosts put two runs across. In the bottom of the second, Wilmington came back to tie it after a Michael Enwright grounder scored Rak from third.

After a scoreless third for both teams, the Wildcats had a tough fourth inning. Skinner walked four and an error by Wilmington scored two. Skinner left the game after 3 2/3, giving up four runs and three hits. He walked seven and struck out one. Jared Waite came in and got the final out of the inning. The score was 5-2 after the three run inning by Westford Academy.

The Grey Ghosts stretched their lead in the fifth. A single scored one early in the inning, and after yet another error, another player crossed the plate for Westford Academy. The score was now 7-2. Waite was taken out after this inning. The final line on him was 1 1/3 IP, giving up two runs and two hits. He walked one and struck out two.

The fireworks in the sixth aside, the end of the game was uneventful. Andrew Valente came in and pitched a strong seventh inning, giving up a hit and striking one out. On the offensive end for Wilmington, Legro and Rak stood out. Legro had a hit, an RBI, and two stolen bases. Rak had two hits, an RBI, a run, and a stolen base. Mello also had a single and a run.

Looking out for weather

SkyWARN weather spotters

By DOUG WOOD-BOYLE

Despite all of his Doppler radar systems, computer models, and other high technology aspects of forecasting the weather, National Weather Service Senior Forecaster William Babcock and his colleagues still like to have several pairs of trained human eyes looking out the window to see what the weather is really doing.

The more information we get, tells us how effective our radar information is," Babcock said, "and it tells what the weather radar is not seeing."

The last part of the statement can be very important in this part of the country. According to Babcock, we are as likely as the mid-western states to get violent thunderstorms, which could generate tornados, but the high hills and tall buildings could disguise the readings on the machines until it is too late.

"A storm could be producing small hail instead of damaging hail," according to Babcock.

He explained, "We do not compare with the plains of Oklahoma or Kansas where the storms can be fascinating. The thunderstorms we see here seem to be more discreet; flash, crash and set up for the next series."

Babcock added that in August, 2000 one of the strong long lasting storms from the mid-west did track all the way to Southern New England. It was necessary at the time for the National Weather Service to put out tornado warnings.

According to Babcock, tornados are formed from thunderstorms and as the storm moves along its track it drags the tornado with it. Tornados, which occur in Massachusetts, usually on a line from the Connecticut River Valley in southwestern Massachusetts to Essex County in the northeast, have been responsible for about 70 deaths per-year, nationally.

He added that thunderstorms can also produce other hazards such as flash flooding from heavy rain, which can be responsible for the deaths of an average 135 people nationally per-year; and lightening, which is responsible for the deaths of 80 to 90 people nationally per-year.

"One of our goals is to bring the numbers (of deaths) down through the use of timely warnings," Babcock said.

Thus, the SKYWARN system was initiated. Babcock said that it has been around since the 1970's when it was initiated during a major outbreak of tornados which killed over 380 people throughout the mid-west.

"One of the most famous was Xenia, Ohio," Babcock said. "The whole day was called the 'Day of the Killer Tornados.' There were 148 tornados covering 15 states.

"In the aftermath, it was determined that relying strictly on radar did not do everything. We did our best job when we combined reports from people in the field who knew what to look for."

Just this week during the severe thunderstorms tunnel clouds were spotted in the area of Topsfield by SkyWARN.

Under the program, Weather Service forecasters work closely with amateur radio operators and other trained spotters. Now the spotters are located across the country.

The modern effort at training the volunteer spotter force started around 1993 or 1994. Currently there are about 450 spotters in southern New England.

Recently a class was held in Wilmington. Another class has been scheduled for Wednesday, July 26 at 6:30 p.m. in Bedford, New Hampshire. For more information call Babcock at (508) 823-1900 or go online to www.weather.gov/boston.

The sessions last about 2 _ hours or a little more depending on questions. The subjects covered are:

• How thunderstorms get started;-

•The hazards they produce;

•The different types of thunderstorms. They can take on different forms depending on how the atmosphere is organized;

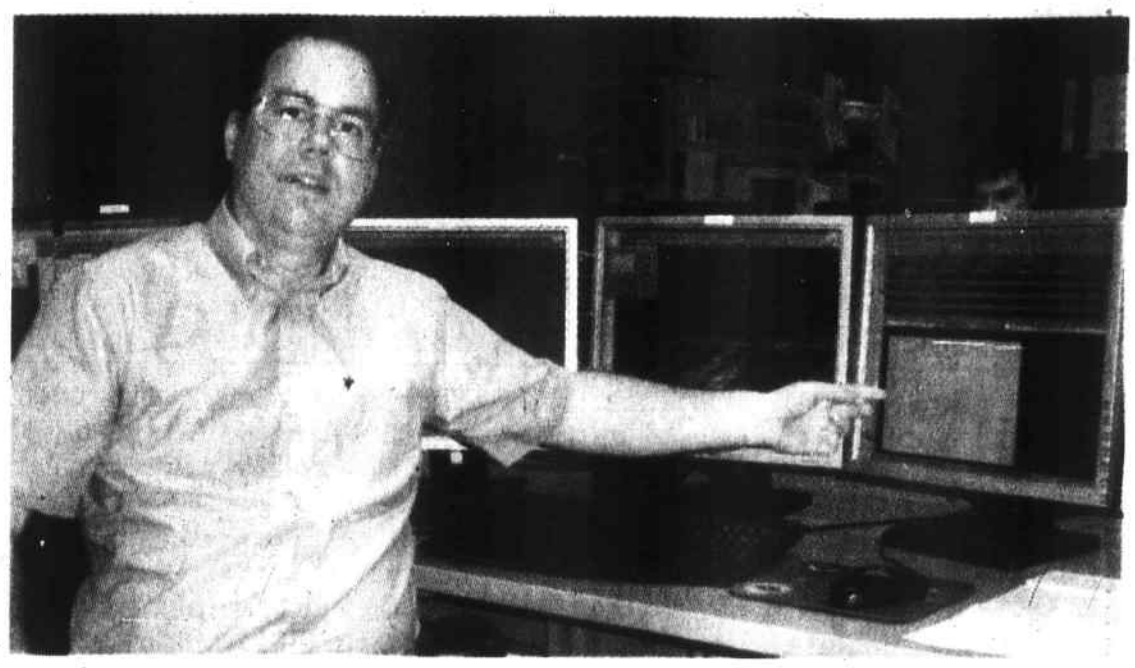
•Weather information and how the spotters can stay up to date, especially so they know when they are needed.

Interestingly, as this story was being written, the Weather Service was issuing a notification that SKYWARN spotters would be needed on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon when a severe thunderstorm watch was in effect for all of Massachusetts.

Babcock also noted that spotters in this part of the country are encouraged not to take risks. They are not the people who have been depicted in movies as chasing tornados and trying to get into the center of them.

The class subject will also include talks about winter storms.

Babcock said, "The winter storms we get can provide different forms of hazards, such as heavy snow, icing and coastal flooding."



WILLIAM BABCOCK, SENIOR FORECASTER and coordinator of the SkyWARN weather spotters used by the National Weather Service, points to some of the high tech computer equipment used to track storms.

He added, "Anytime in the winter, when you see snowfall amounts they are from spotters we have trained. They are also used by the electronic media and some newspapers."

According to Babcock, "SKYWARN is not just about thunderstorms, it is also about winter or any kind of weather that can produce hazards."

No special equipment is needed. Snowfall measurements and the size of hail can be done with normal rulers and yardsticks.

"Anemometers are nice," Babcock said, "but a person can gauge wind strength by the effect it has on the trees; knocking down power lines or just by blowing a few leaves."

He said, "The basic stuff people can do without equipment. The equipment people get on their own, can help us out with additional information."

However, the graduates of the course are issued an identification card with a spotter number on it and it can also be used to measure the size of hail stones.

The cards also contain a list of key criteria the weather service wants to hear about if the spotter observes certain conditions. Registration is not required and the classes are free of charge.

"We ask that the spotters be 16 years-old and older," Babcock said. "People are welcome to come to the class and observe. They are not required to register as a spotter."

According to Babcock, "The program's success is measured by how well we can do our job. Last year we were able to warn for about 80 percent of all the thunderstorms that occurred.

"We had warnings out an average of 17 minutes before an event occurred. Those numbers are an improvement."

He added, "The (spotter)

"DEADMAN'S CHEST" A SWASHBUCKLER!

IN THIS PHOTO RELEASED BY WALT DISNEY PICTURES, actor Johnny Depp appears in this scene from "Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest." Depp's boozy, woozy buccaneer Jack Sparrow has plundered the box office, with Disney's swashbuckling sequel taking in a record $132 million in its first three days, according to studio estimates on Sunday, July 9, 2006. Disney's sequel sailed past the previous all-time best debut, 2002's "Spider-Man," which took in $114.8 million in its first weekend.

"PIRATES OF THE CARIBBEAN: DEAD MAN'S CHEST"
GRADE: ****

"Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest," is the swashbuckling sequel to 2003's "Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl," with a third film will set sail next year.

Director Gore Verbinski has spun sea-worthy tale on this voyage. Summer movie audiences, "Dead Man's Chest" is truly worthy of your doubloons and galleons and pieces of eight.

It's that tawdry buccaneer Johnny Depp who'll have you pounding your peg leg on the theater floor in salute. Swaying around in a constant state of controlled bewilderment, three sheets into the wind, his turn as Sparrow is the prize of the seven seas, equal if not superior to the performance that won him an Oscar nomination in the first film. Depp is the center of the mayhem, and its the other aspects of the spectacle that circle him like sharks.

The story has more twists than fishing line caught in a gale. The humor and dialogue shall blow ye down, although some of the plotting is darker than the ocean on a moonless night. The visuals are eye-popping, and may require you to wear a pirate's eye patch when you're done.

Keira Knightley makes for a daunting buccaneer as British society fixture Elizabeth Swann. On the verge of her wedding to Will Turner (Orlando Bloom), an unscrupulous government official trumps up charges against the lovebirds and sends them to prison.

Will is swindled into chasing down Sparrow, a fugitive at sea who's got his own problems. Legendary ocean phantom Davy Jones (Bill Nighy) has handed Sparrow the black spot, a warning that he's cleaned out a spot in his locker for our beloved anti-hero.

So grab yourself a sea ration and a bottle of rum, or a soda and popcorn, is that's more your thing,and drop anchor with this summer treasure. Aye-aye!

"SUPERMAN RETURNS"
GRADE: ****

In "Superman Returns," the Man of Steel makes his first appearance in nearly two decades to save the day, the planet, and Hollywood's dwindling box office receipts.

To head this new edition, director Bryan Singer (the first two "X-Men" movies) selected Brandon Routh, a charismatic and almost unknown young actor. Routh, who at times looks eerily looks like Christopher Reeve on screen, performs well enough but the true stars of this film are its many special effects gurus and production designers.

Director Singer, who turned down the third "X-Men" to take the helm here, successfully renders the engaging story created by himself and several other credited screenwriters. As advertised, Superman does return from his five year journey in search of any remnants of his home planet and immediately lands in a conflict with arch-nemesis Lex Luthor, played both menacingly and amusingly by Kevin Spacey, who won his first Oscar working with Singer in "The Usual Suspects."

Singer begins slow, taking his time chronicling Superman's awkward transformation back into his Clark Kent identity. Meanwhile, Luthor assembles what he needs to dominate the planet.

Even after the lines have been drawn, however, the story throws in some unexpected curves. The narrative also pauses to give the characters enough background to make them fully rounded humans. The palpable personal chemistry between Superman and Lois Lane still hovers near the surface, making their brief encounters sweet, touching, and full of hidden emotion.

The superstar creators of "Superman Returns" are the special effects people who decorate our hero's various adventures. Within these colorful environments, a series of spectacular, elaborate visual creations can be found, from underwater chambers to hideaway crystal caves. Even the more mundane interiors, such as the Daily Planet Art Deco office, show spark and intelligence.

"NACHO LIBRE"
GRADE: *

Nacho Libre, which is co-written by Napoleon Dynamite's Jared Hess as well as Jerusha Hess and School of Rock writer Mike White is an embarrassment.

The movie is amateurish, excruciating to watch, and difficult to believe that men with comic sharp minds such as Hess, White and Jack Black could fall so short of the mark.

The story revolves around Nacho (Black), an orphan with no skills, who is a cook — and a bad one — at the monastery where he was raised.

Nacho wants to earn money to buy better ingredients so he can cook better meals for the orphans and priests — as well as the newly arrived Sister Encarnacion. He decides to become a wrestler.

The movie's jokes basically revolve around Nacho getting beat up in the ring as well as several revolving around flatulence.

The humor is strictly grade school. The movie is missing the wit and charm Hess, who directs, created for Napoleon Dynamite and White and Black used in School of Rock.

Black's phony Mexican accent is awful, but maybe that's part of the joke.

Nacho Libre is so bad that it could set U.S.-Mexican relations back 50 years, but it may solve the illegal worker situation as millions begin streaming out of the country to flee this film.

Nacho Libre is a sleeper hold on the careers of all involved.

"AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH"
GRADE: ****

There is a very scary movie in theaters these days, but it has nothing to do with the horror genre.

Al Gore will send chilld down your spine with "An Inconvenient Truth," a provocative and disturbing documentary about the ex-vice preseident's efforts to educate Americans on the threat of global warming.

The Al Gore we see in the film doesn't act like an alarmist. He speaks in a calm, controlled voice, makes jokes and carriess himself with professorial restraint.

But he'll still scare the pants off you.

For the last several years Gore has been touring the world with what he calls "the slide show" — a sophisticated multimedia presentation that carefully lays out the history of global warming. It's the world's biggest PowerPoint presentation, and Gore walks the stage in front of a massive screen onto which charts, maps, photos and text are projected.

Referring to his presentation as "a nature hike through the Book of Revelation," Gore informs us that 2005 had the highest temperatures ever recorded, and that the 10 hottest years in recorded history happened in the last 14 years.

He contrasts photos of glaciers and ice floes taken decades ago with more recent shots to illustrate their accelerated melting. He says Arctic biologists are finding the bodies of polar bears that have drowned while looking in vain for solid ice upon which they can rest and hunt.

The culprit, Gore insists, is carbon dioxide generated by our fossil fuel-burning lifestyle. Americans contribute more carbon dioxide to the atmosphere than the rest of the world combined.

Gore's presentation has been so carefully scripted and thoroughly rehearsed that there's hardly a second of spontaneity in it. His message: global warming is real, we're responsible for it, and we can do something about it without ruining the U.S. economy. But we're running out of time.

"CARS"
GRADE: ****

In "Cars," the animation wizards at Pixar imagine an alternate universe where automobiles drive themselvesand talk, TV shows are interrupted for "braking news" bulletins, flies are shaped like tiny Volkswagen Bugs and the skies are sometimes streaked fluffy white tire tracks instead of vapor trails from airplanes (and gas also doesn't cost a dime apparently). It's another amazing achievement for the studio, as the film captures the imagination of children while throwing is some humor for the adults in the room as well.

"Cars" has jokes such as a racing car sponsored by Hostile Takeover Bank, and there's cameo appearances from Tom and Ray Magliozzi, the hosts of National Public Radio's "Car Talk"), it also features some stunning visuals, including a mock Monument Valley, in which all the rock formations are shaped like hubcaps and car hoods, and a nondescript little town that turns into a wonderland of glorious neon after the sun goes down.

This attention to detail and colors makes "Cars" one of the most eye-pleasing computer-animated films to date, and the soundtrack by John Mayer, Rascal Flatts and Sheryl Crow is an added bonus.

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a champion racer who has let success go straight to his head. He soon finds himself stranded in the long-dormant Radiator Springs, where he learns he's going to need some help to get back on the road.

Those who leave early will miss a great salute to veteran Pixar star John Ratzenberger that doubles as a sort of miniretrospective of the animation studio's hits.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? OH, SO MUCH

A veteran's veteran in Winchester

"West Woburn resident Charles Culhane replaced Joseph Simas as the city's Veterans' Agent, effective April 30," notes the Winchester edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"'I personally informed (Simas) in mid-February,' wrote McLaughlin in an interview via e-mail.

"'(Simas') appointment expired on April 30, 2006. Hence, (Simas) remained in place until April 30,' added McLaughlin.

"'The mayor noted Simas greeted the news amicably and 'offered to help (Culhane) transition to his new role.'

"McLaughlin also reported that, contrary to rumor, the Veterans' Agent position is not being reduced to part-time status.

"'But, the salary was reduced in a cost-savings measure to save the city money,' wrote McLaughlin.

"Simas had been the city's Veterans' Agent since Jan. 2, 2003, when he succeeded the late William Stukey. The position paid a base salary of $52,727.47.

"Culhane is a former Winchester police officer who was also recently nominated by McLaughlin to become a member of the Woburn Golf & Ski Authoritv."

Always remembered in Burlington

"The care and comfort which Jeanne Garrett gave to the town's seniors in her 22 years as Council on Aging coordinator was reflected by the many people who attended the dedication of the senior center in her honor," notes the Burlington edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"Garrett, who died a year ago at age 69, will now always be remembered with a sign on the Human Services Center.

"It is a green background with gold letters, and reads, 'Jeanne A. Garrett Senior Center.'

"And before everyone walked outside in the cold and very bright sunshine for the sign dedication, the many in attendance raised their glasses to Jeanne in a champagne toast.

"'I must say I am at a loss for words,' said Selectman Joseph Impemba, one of several speakers who remembered Jeanne.

"'I am quite honored that in the 15 years I have been on the Board of Selectmen, I have been fortunate enough to have the Council on Aging as my subcommittee,' Impemba added. 'Jeanne was somebody I worked with, and she was a friend of mine. She was instrumental in bringing about change for the seniors in this town.'

"'It is so satisfying to see this number of people come out to this dedication,' Impemba said.

"'For Jeanne, this was not a job, it was a love,' Impemba continued. 'She loved everybody, and loved everything she did.'

"Council on Aging Chairwoman Muriel O'Brien called Jeanne 'my friend, a loyal person, and wonderful to work with....'"

Nurturing nature in Reading

Debuting on Reading Community Television was 'Reading Town Forest,' an hour-long documentary on the Reading Town Forest.

"The documentary was completed over the course of many months," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle," as Producer John Surette made several trips to the forest between April and December of 2005. Surette also narrates the program and wrote original music for it. The completed film features an array of wildlife footage, including deer, beavers, wingless beetles, varieties of birds and dragonflies of many different colors.

"History was also a prominent part of the program. Do you know when the forest was planted? Did you know there was a cranberry bog near the Wood End school years ago? Even the last ice age left its mark on the forest. Follow a local science teacher on a bird walk and see what a Reading boy scout did to repair a trail. You will find out there is more to the forest than a few trees.

"A second feature, focusing on the Ipswich River was set to debut soon after. This program was originally intended to be part of the Town Forest feature but as work was completed it became clear that the scope of the project exceeded one program.

"This program was created using RCTV equipment and facilities by member John Surette. These benefits and entitlements are available to all members of RCTV who wish to produce a program. Anyone can produce a program simply by becoming a RCTV member. Members have access to both the training and equipment necessary to produce their own segment based on their own idea. Training and access to equipment is available for free to all RCTV members...."

STEPPING UP TO THE PLATE

Diversity tops the menu in Wakefield

"Wakefield residents had the opportunity to Dine Out for Diversity, as part of an event that served as a fundraiser for Wakefield High School's diversity program," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"This fund raising event took place at the Bear Rock Café, located in the Jordan's Furniture complex on Walker's Brook Drive in Reading.

"The Bear Rock Café donated a portion of the proceeds paid by local residents to Wakefield High School's diversity related programs. Diners indicated that they would like to have a portion of their bill contributed to WHS's programs when ordering.

"Wakefield High School's diversity programs are far-reaching and they encompass an array of events, including special speakers, student projects, and field trips - all of which are intended to promote diversity within the Wakefield High School community.

"'A new student-faculty initiative this year is the Diversity Council,' school officials explained in a recent announcement.

"Members of the newly formed Diversity Council had the chance to attend the World of Difference Conference, which was sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League. The recent event took place at the Park Plaza Castle in Boston.

"School leaders are optimistic that the members of this new Diversity Council will draw upon the lessons learned at this recent conference and other similar activities as they make strides toward establishing a more inclusive and accepting environment within Wakefield High School.

"In other news, Wakefield High School Principal Elinor Freedman has announced that two Wakefield High students have been honored by the Middlesex League Principals Association for their outstanding contributions to the school that they attend: Wakefield High School students Ella Merullo and Joseph Flynn, both of whom are members of the Class of 2007...."

Gold Team places nationally in North Reading

"North Reading High School students Kerrie Stewart (Captain), Beth Vitale, John Deshaies, Michael Black, and Chris Marciano, the members of the school's 2006 Gold LifeSmarts Team, placed fifth at this year's national competition in Philadelphia, PA.," notes the "North Reading Transcript."

"The team was defeated once by Maryland, the 2005 national champs, and once by Washington, this year's second place team. The students thoroughly enjoyed the competition. In the words of senior John Deshaies, 'LifeSmarts is valuable because of its direct application to everyday life.'

"Senior team captain Kerrie Stewart and the competition gave them an opportunity to meet kids from all over the country and break stereotypes. The NRHS team spent most of the trip with sister team Kansas and met teams from South Carolina, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, among other states.

"Mrs. Lillian Diezemann, coach of the team for nine years and head of the NRHS School-to-Career Department, really values the LifeSmarts program because it parallels the curriculum at North Reading High School. As senior Beth Vitale said, 'Even when you get a question wrong you still learn something useful.'

"Interested students took the on-line LifeSmarts qualifying test...."

Schools step up in Lynnfield

"Given the responsibility of finding ways to bolster recycling in Lynnfield, the town's Recycling Committee is working to increase awareness of the needs and benefits of recycling," notes the "Lynnfield Villager."

"Beyond the obvious environmental benefits, each ton of paper recycled saves Lynnfield taxpayers money.

"Lynnfield's cost for tipping (disposal) fees for trash is $61 per ton, but the town is paid $25 per ton of paper that is recycled. Consequently, each ton of paper put in the trash costs taxpayers $86, and most residents are throwing away money at a time when the town needs it more than ever, says the Recycling Committee.

"The average household trash bag has approximately 35% paper, according to the EPA's most current figures. And the American Forest & Paper Association estimates that current recycling efforts capture only half of the total paper available in the waste stream. In 2001, Lynnfield's recycling rate was 21%. In 2003, it decreased to 19%.

"The Committee's first initiative, a paper-recycling program, is now underway at the four schools. The success of the school program results from the collaboration of many committed individuals. With the enthusiastic support of the schools' principals and a few advocates, the program has been embraced by teachers and students. Each school developed a system to both optimize participation and minimize interruption of the school day.

Babcock explained the way the weather prediction system works in three stages. The first stage is a severe weather outlook, which could be issued up to 24 hours in advance of a storm. This would be followed by a warning, which is issued from the Weather Service office in Norman Oklahoma.

The final stage is a warning. For this area warnings are issued by Babcock and his colleagues in Taunton.

THE 2006 LOWELL QUILT FESTIVAL

The New England Quilt Museum, the only in the region dedicated solely to the study and preservation of American quilt making, proudly presents the 2006 Lowell Quilt Festival, a Citywide Celebration of Quilts, August 3 - 6.

The biennial weekend event pays homage to the ever growing interest in quilt making, and finds its way into nearly every city block of historic downtown Lowell, the birthplace of the modern textile industry in America.

A truly walkable city, Lowell offers a fascinating cultural and historical background to view, learn and appreciate the art of quiltmaking.

The first New England Images quilt show was launched in 1983 at the Topsfield Fair for 12 days. Since then the Auxiliary of The New England Quilt Museum has produced Images (juried quilt show) and its many components.

The 4 day multi-venue event, featuring exhibitions, classes, workshops, lectures, auctions, appraisals, vendors and a variety of special receptions, is almost entirely volunteer run by members of the museum's auxiliary.

At Paul Tsongas Arena, major events include Images 2006, a juried show of nearly 200 quilts, special retrospective exhibitions that focus on quiltmakers Marilyn Belford of New York, who makes stunning realistic portraits, and Suzanne Knopp of Lowell, who has created a number of unique quilts in both the traditional and art styles.

Laura-Cater-Woods presents quilts created in response to Hurricane Katrina. The Art Bras exhibit, organized by The Way to Women's Wellness Foundation, promotes breast cancer awareness through original art bras created by women throughout the United States.

Landscaping can add beauty, value to home

The look of your lawn and garden may be the first and perhaps the most lasting impression people have of your home and property. Landscaping plays an essential role in enhancing a home's value and beauty.

Fortunately, homeowners can turn their own landscapes into works of art at an affordable price.

In recent years, many companies have begun to introduce a larger variety of bagged rock and mulch. A new line of decorative rock and stone from Vigoro offers landscaping enthusiasts 26 varieties of bagged products in a wide array of shapes, sizes and colors.

Decorative landscaping stones and mulches are not only an excellent way to beautify and accent garden beds, ponds, driveways and walkways, they also provide natural benefits to the soil and plants. These benefits include controlling and reducing erosion, retaining moisture and controlling weeds.

Here are a few tips on choosing and applying mulch.

- Choose mulch that is long lasting and not easily washed away.
- Pick mulch that has a loose structure to let water pass through quickly.
- Apply mulch in late spring. This helps reduce soil temperature and save water.
- Apply fine mulches one to two inches deep. Coarse or fluffy mulches should be put on three to four inches deep.
- Apply mulch evenly and level it with a rake or your hands.
- Wet thoroughly after applying mulch.
- Pull mulch a few inches away from plant stems and tree trunks.

To further control weeds and to keep plants healthy, there's a new mulch called Vigoro Mulch with Weed Stop. It's the first mulch to contain pre-emergent herbicide, controlling unwanted weeds for up to four months, yet allowing bulbs, established flowers, shrubs and trees to thrive.

This mulch is certified by the Mulch and Soil Council as the only containing natural forest products.

For more lawn and garden tips and information, visit www.vigoro .com.

Golfers' delight; The Greens

Imagine waking up each day as though you were on vacation...and then realize how lucky you are that you are simply at home, enjoying beautiful surroundings that rival even the best resort money can buy.

For years "The Greens" has been the place to be for those seeking a luxurious lifestyle in a lush setting. Many new condos have been built (and many continue to be built) but none offer the beauty and tranquility of this location.

Driving up to your new home, you will be instantly relaxed at the sight of a lighted fountain offering the peaceful sound of moving water. This totally newly updated 2 bedroom, 2.5 bath Townhome offers amazing views from both the front and the back. Once inside, from every room you can look out and be inspired by acres of green rolling hills, and perhaps watch to see if someone may score a hole in one at the 18th!

From the moment you walk in, it will be obvious how special this property is. The interior has been masterfully redone (thank goodness... so many units you have seen at "The Greens" still remain in original, tired condition). The dramatic two-story foyer and beautiful finishes will captivate you. New hardwood floors grace the entire first floor, including the bright sunroom leading to your deck. The kitchen has been done with beautiful granite counters, stainless appliances and tasteful maple cabinetry. Each of the 2.5 baths is completely new; all offer gorgeous vanities, glass-enclosed tubs, smashing marble and exquisite fixtures. There is also a finished basement with two complete rooms for those who need extra space for the home office, gym, or hobby room. A one-car garage completes this most sought after package. Please visit our Open House Sunday, July 16th, 12 - 1:30 PM.

This fine property is currently listed at $469,900, and is being marketed by Rick Nazzaro of Colonial Manor Realty. For more information on this very special home or to arrange a private viewing, call Rick at (781) 944-6300, or stop by the offices of Colonial Manor Realty at 127 Franklin Street in Reading (across from HomeGoods).

COME INSIDE AND MAKE YOURSELF COMFORTABLE in this beautiful, newly updated Townhome. You'll be delighted with the spectacular views of the golf course. Cooking will be a pleasure in the lovely stainless, granite and maple kitchen. All the baths are new, and are highlighted by exquisite fixtures.
